Combining Advanced Orthodontic Expertise, Longstanding Patient Relationships, and Community-Centered Care Through a Trusted Family Dental Practice

Audubon, Pennsylvania May 11, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - Audubon, Pennsylvania — Sheldon Boruchow, DDS, is a highly experienced dentist who has spent more than three decades building a trusted, family-centered dental practice rooted in long-term relationships, compassionate care, and continuous learning. Serving patients throughout the Audubon community, Dr. Boruchow has established a reputation for combining comprehensive dental expertise with a strong personal connection to the families he treats.

After earning his Doctor of Dental Surgery Degree from Temple University Kornberg School of Dentistry, Dr. Boruchow began his career working in public health and practicing within other dental offices. While those early experiences provided valuable clinical and professional training, he ultimately envisioned creating a smaller, more personalized dental practice centered on long-term patient relationships and individualized care.

Dr. Boruchow initially opened his practice part-time in a home office located within a neighborhood community. As both his family and patient base expanded, the practice later moved into a nearby professional office space, steadily growing into a respected local family practice that now serves multiple generations of patients.

Although trained comprehensively in general dentistry, Dr. Boruchow developed a particular passion for orthodontics early in his career. Recognizing that traditional dental school education provides only foundational orthodontic instruction, he pursued several additional years of advanced orthodontic training through the Institute of Graduate Dentists. He describes this focused expertise as a “semi-specialty” in orthodontics and especially enjoys working with Invisalign treatment and monitoring children’s orthodontic growth and development over time.

A member of the American Orthodontic Society, Dr. Boruchow remains committed to continuing education and staying current with evolving dental technologies and treatment advancements. He believes dentistry continues changing rapidly, particularly through innovations in digital technology, orthodontics, and patient care solutions, making lifelong learning essential to providing the highest quality care.

In addition to his private practice work, Dr. Boruchow has served as a local school dentist for approximately 20 years, conducting dental examinations and promoting preventive oral health education for students throughout the community. His longstanding involvement reflects his deep commitment to both community health and early preventive care.

What Dr. Boruchow values most about his career today is the depth of the relationships he has built over the past 30 years. Many of his patients have remained with him for decades, with entire families spanning multiple generations continuing to receive care within his practice. He believes those long-term connections have transformed his office into a true family practice in every sense.

Dr. Boruchow also finds dentistry more fascinating today than when he first entered the profession, energized by ongoing advancements in technology and treatment methods. He especially enjoys orthodontic care and Invisalign treatment, finding great satisfaction in helping children and young patients improve both function and confidence through proper orthodontic development.

Outside of dentistry, Dr. Boruchow is an avid ballroom dancer and has even been featured in a local newspaper for his passion and talent in dance. His interests outside the office reflect the same discipline, creativity, and lifelong dedication to growth that have defined his professional career.

Through decades of compassionate patient care, orthodontic expertise, and community involvement, Dr. Sheldon Boruchow continues to build a legacy centered on trust, family relationships, and a genuine passion for helping people smile with confidence.
