

Majoris Technologies Announces Strategic Collaboration with Shan Potts Law Offices to Support India–U.S. Talent Mobility

The Majoris Technologies and Shan Potts Law Offices collaboration will help technology professionals, staffing partners, employers, and U.S.-bound talent better understand immigration options, timing, and next steps across the India–U.S. corridor.

Los Angeles, California May 21, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - Majoris Technologies, an India-based technology staffing and talent-solutions company, today announced a strategic collaboration with Shan Potts Law Offices, a U.S. immigration law firm based in Los Angeles, California.

The collaboration is one of the first of its kind, designed to support technology professionals, U.S.-based visa holders, India-based candidates, staffing partners, and employers who are navigating U.S. career opportunities, immigration questions, job changes, workforce planning, and long-term plans in the United States.

Through this collaboration, Majoris Technologies will expand the value it provides to its professional and business network by creating a more structured and accessible way for individuals and companies to identify immigration concerns, understand available options, and connect with U.S. immigration guidance when appropriate.

“We’re excited to partner with Shan Potts Law Offices to create a structured and accessible pathway for professionals exploring opportunities in the United States, combining strong talent reach with the right legal expertise,” said Yatharth Sharma, Founder, Majoris Technologies.

For international professionals and employers operating across the India–U.S. corridor, immigration questions often arise at important moments: when a visa deadline is approaching, a government notice is received, a job change occurs, a company needs to protect its workforce, or a family begins planning for permanent residence.

“When a visa deadline is fast approaching, a visa is at risk of denial, a job change occurs, or a family begins planning for permanent residence, immigration is no longer abstract — it becomes immediate,” said Shan D. Potts, Esq., Founder and Attorney at Shan Potts Law Offices.

“For India-based technology professionals, U.S.-based visa holders, staffing partners, and employers, the question is often not simply, ‘What visa is available?’ but, ‘What is the safest and smartest path forward now?’ That is why the Majoris collaboration matters. It creates a practical channel for people and companies to identify risk earlier, understand their immigration options, and act before uncertainty becomes disruption.

“The India–U.S. corridor is full of opportunity, but opportunity needs structure — a clear legal plan, the right timing, and disciplined execution. Our goal is to help professionals, families, and companies move forward with clarity and confidence.”

The initial focus of the collaboration will include U.S.-based professionals, India-based technology talent, staffing vendors, systems integrators, and companies with workforce immigration needs. Areas of focus may include visa and status deadlines, government requests for more information, denial-risk concerns, job changes, H-1B transfer issues, student-to-employment visa transitions, green card planning, employer sponsorship questions, workforce planning, and broader U.S. immigration strategy.

The first phase will focus on educational outreach, a dedicated intake pathway, and targeted communication to selected professional and business audiences within the Majoris network. Interested individuals and companies will be able to share their immigration concerns, urgency level, and desired next step through a structured review process.

The collaboration reflects a shared commitment to supporting the India–U.S. talent market. This includes technology professionals, visa holders, staffing firms, employers, students, founders, and families whose immigration decisions are connected to career growth, workforce planning, business continuity, and long-term opportunity.

Immigration advice and representation, where appropriate, will be provided only by Shan Potts Law Offices through a separate attorney-client agreement.

About Majoris Technologies

Majoris Technologies is a technology staffing and talent-solutions company based in India. The company works within the technology workforce ecosystem and supports professionals, candidates, vendors, and companies with staffing, talent placement, and workforce-solutions needs.

About Shan Potts Law Offices

Shan Potts Law Offices is a U.S. immigration law firm based in Los Angeles, California. The firm represents individuals, families, professionals, founders, and businesses in a wide range of immigration matters, including work visas, green card planning, family immigration, waivers, removal defense, asylum, federal court matters, and long-term immigration planning.

Media Contact

Shan Potts Law Offices

@shanpottslaw.com

Source : Majoris Technologies

See on IssueWire