

New Book Release - Dante's Plot by Jack Dunn

Did Dante write everything in The Divine Comedy? There is a belief that Dante had access to an ancient scroll called The Apocalypse of Peter, a Gnostic creation from the 4th century that tells about Jesus Christ describing Heaven and Hell!

The Cult's Motto - "Hell is a deception!"

Dante Alighieri wrote The Divine Comedy between 1308 and 1321. The Inferno was published in manuscript form early in the 14th century, but the first official illustrations of the book did not appear until much later in time. The work was first published in 1472 with the simple title Comedia, which is Tuscan for comedy. Later, it was changed to the modern Italian word Commedia. The Venetian humanist Lodovico Dolce's edition, published in 1555 by Gabriele Giolito de' Ferrari, was the first to use the title Divina Comedia.

The Nag Hammadi codices also referred to as the Gnostic Gospels were first published in English in 1977 after being found in 1945 close to Nag Hammadi, Egypt. At first, it was believed that these ancient writings which comprise more than fifty theological and intellectual works had been burned during the early Christian conflict over orthodoxy. The codices' discovery and translation have had a profound impact on the understanding of early Christianity and Gnostic beliefs.

The Apocalypse of Peter, one of the Nag Hammadi codices, describes Jesus Christ and his disciple Peter being on Mount Olives following His Resurrection. The author of the scroll claims that Saint Peter experienced a Tour of Heaven and Hell from Jesus while they were there. Tragically, the scroll was lost after it was written, somewhere around 150 AD.

In 2025 and 2026, Stephen Hathaway and Catherine Turrell embark on another journey to locate the scroll linked to Saint Peter and figure out its connection to Dante's The Divine Comedy and his portrayals of Hell in its first part, called Inferno.

Fact or Fiction
A Novel

New York City, New York May 28, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - In 2026, an ancient scroll is uncovered that describes Heaven and Hell, as described by Jesus Christ to Saint Peter on the Mount of Olives, in Israel. It was written by a Gnostic writer in an attempt to undermine Christianity and it is called The Apocalypse of Peter. In the middle ages, it re-surfaced in Italy in the epic poem by Dante, The Divine Comedy. A great deal of the descriptions in the scroll appears in The Inferno, as far as the levels of Hell and the punishments that await sinners in the world in the afterlife. It is possible that Jesus Christ himself warned all humans about the rewards in Heaven, and the terrors in Hell, and the author bravely retold His story to keep it alive for the world. The characters in this story embark on an investigation that takes them all over the world to try to locate the original scroll and keep it out of the hands of present-day people who will use it once again to attack Christianity and the other religions of the world, trying to suppress anyone who opposes them.
