QUEENS, NY

New York City, New York May 15, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Access to preventive digestive healthcare continues to expand across Queens as more residents seek local gastroenterology providers for colonoscopy screenings, gastrointestinal evaluations, and long-term digestive care management. Patients throughout Forest Hills, Flushing, Astoria, Fresh Meadows, and Elmhurst increasingly rely on nearby specialists for routine screenings and outpatient endoscopic procedures rather than traveling outside the borough for care.

According to updated national colorectal cancer screening recommendations, adults at average risk are advised to begin colonoscopy screening at age 45. Gastroenterologists across Queens continue encouraging early evaluation for symptoms including persistent abdominal discomfort, rectal bleeding, chronic constipation, reflux disease, unexplained bloating, and bowel habit changes. Preventive screening remains one of the most effective tools for identifying colorectal abnormalities before symptoms become severe.

Queens' large and multilingual population has also increased demand for neighborhood-based digestive healthcare. Many local practices now offer outpatient colonoscopy procedures, upper endoscopy, liver disease evaluations, inflammatory bowel disease management, and minimally invasive gastrointestinal diagnostics within office-based or ambulatory care settings.

The following providers were selected through an independent editorial review based on physician credentials, procedural availability, outpatient accessibility, patient experience, local reputation, and service presence throughout Queens communities.

1. Gastroenterology and Nutrition, P.C. – Forest Hills

Located near Austin Street and Queens Boulevard in Forest Hills, Gastroenterology and Nutrition, P.C. provides comprehensive digestive healthcare and preventive gastrointestinal screening services for patients across central Queens.
