“What I love most about practicing medicine is twofold,” Anne explains. “First, I’m driven by a genuine curiosity and a desire to continuously learn and challenge myself to be the best clinician I can be. Second, I find deep fulfillment in supporting others through some of the most difficult moments in their lives. I value meeting people where they are, without judgment, and walking alongside them on their individual journey toward health and well-being.”

Anne’s approach to patient care is deeply shaped by both professional expertise and personal experience. With more than 26 years of sobriety and firsthand understanding of recovery, she brings empathy, authenticity, and compassion to her work with individuals facing mental health and substance use disorders. She is especially passionate about serving underserved populations and believes strongly in holistic, integrated care that supports long-term healing, stability, and wellness.
