

Brooklyn Families Prioritize Preventive Dental Care for Children

Local pediatric dental expert discusses the growing emphasis on early oral health and preventive care among Brooklyn families.

Long Island, New York Jun 11, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - As more parents focus on preventive healthcare for their children, pediatric oral health has become an increasingly important part of that conversation. From routine dental exams to early intervention for developing issues, families are seeking ways to establish healthy habits that can help children maintain strong smiles from infancy through adolescence.

This growing awareness is the focus of a feature highlighting trends in children's oral health across Brooklyn. The report examines how families are approaching preventive dental care, the importance of early dental visits, and the role local providers play in supporting long-term oral health outcomes for children throughout the community.

Dr. Yury Slepak, DDS, founder of Bite Squad Dental of NYC, brings more than two decades of experience treating children of all ages. He is a board-certified pediatric dentist through the American Board of Pediatric Dentistry, an honors graduate of New York University College of Dentistry, and completed his Pediatric Dentistry Residency at Maimonides Medical Center in Brooklyn. His clinical experience includes pediatric dentistry, special-needs dentistry, and hospital-based dental care for children requiring advanced treatment options.

"Many dental concerns we see in children can be addressed more effectively when families establish healthy habits early and maintain regular dental visits," said Dr. Slepak. "Our goal is to help children feel comfortable with dental care from a young age while providing parents with the education and support they need to make informed decisions about their child's oral health."

For more than 20 years, Bite Squad Dental of NYC has served families throughout Brooklyn. The practice provides pediatric dentistry, preventive care, emergency dental services, tooth-colored fillings, dental sealants, sedation dentistry, hospital-based treatment options, and care for children with special healthcare needs. The practice is supported by a team of pediatric and general dental professionals committed to creating a welcoming environment for children and their families.
