

Bulwark Bullion Launches Online Precious Metals Business Built by Oregon Overnight USPS Employee and Father

New Oregon-based precious metals dealer combines transparent pricing, educational resources, and a founder's years of self-taught expertise in the bullion industry.

Springfield, Oregon Jun 22, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - Bulwark Bullion, a new Oregon-based online precious metals dealer, today announced the official launch of its e-commerce platform, offering gold, silver, platinum, and palladium bullion backed by transparent pricing, educational resources, and a customer-first approach.

Founded by Oregon resident Adam, Bulwark Bullion was built over several years while he balanced a full-time overnight career at USPS and life as a new father. Rather than outsourcing the work, Adam spent his limited free time teaching himself the skills needed to build an online business—from website development and search engine optimization to digital marketing, e-commerce operations, and the practical realities of launching a company.

At the same time, he continued studying the precious metals market, developing relationships within the industry, and refining the vision for what would eventually become Bulwark Bullion.

"Bulwark Bullion wasn't built overnight," said Adam, founder of Bulwark Bullion. "It was built one evening, one weekend, and one day off at a time. After working overnight, I'd come home knowing I still had another job waiting for me—building this company. I wasn't chasing a shortcut. I was trying to build something lasting for my family and something customers could genuinely trust."

Bulwark Bullion was created around a simple idea: buying physical precious metals shouldn't be confusing or intimidating. The company combines competitive pricing with educational content designed to help customers understand the products they're purchasing, whether they're buying their first silver coin or expanding an established bullion portfolio.

"I've spent years following the precious metals market," Adam said. "What I saw over and over was that many new buyers felt overwhelmed. I wanted Bulwark Bullion to be the company that explains things clearly, prices products fairly, and earns trust through honesty rather than high-pressure sales tactics."

The company offers a growing selection of bullion coins, bars, and rounds from respected mints and refiners, along with educational articles covering topics such as gold versus silver, bullion premiums, coins versus bars, and beginner buying guides.

Unlike many startup companies, Bulwark Bullion was not launched with outside investors or a large team. It was built through years of self-directed learning, persistence, and a commitment to creating a business that reflects the values of hard work, transparency, and long-term customer relationships.

"Every entrepreneur has a reason for starting a business," Adam said. "For me, it was about creating something meaningful for my family while helping others confidently own physical precious metals. Bulwark Bullion is the result of years of learning, persistence, and believing that small steps every day eventually become something much bigger."
