New York City, New York Jun 12, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - CrewBloom, a global remote staffing agency headquartered in New York City, continues to help U.S. businesses solve one of their most persistent operational challenges: finding skilled sales, support, and back-office talent without the cost and delay of traditional hiring.

Since its founding in 2016, CrewBloom has built a talent network spanning 22 countries, giving companies of all sizes access to experienced professionals in roles such as business development representatives, inside sales representatives, account executives, customer support specialists, and client success managers. Clients working with CrewBloom report average cost savings of 70% compared to local hiring, without compromising on quality or accountability.

"Companies have been told for years that great talent has to be expensive or hard to find. Neither is true anymore," said a CrewBloom spokesperson. "There are exceptional sales and support professionals around the world who are simply overlooked because job boards don't reach them. Our job is to find those people, vet them rigorously, and connect them with businesses that are ready to grow."

CrewBloom's process is designed to remove the friction most companies associate with hiring. After an initial consultation, the company sources, screens, and shortlists candidates — each with a full work history, skills overview, and video introduction — so business owners can evaluate fit before a single interview takes place. Most clients have a new hire selected and in training within 15 to 20 business days, compared to the 60-to-90-day timelines common with traditional recruiting.

The company also manages the cross-border complexities that often deter businesses from hiring internationally, including payroll, contracts, and labor law compliance, allowing clients to focus on managing outcomes rather than HR logistics. CrewBloom operates without long-term contracts, asking only for two weeks' notice, a structure the company says reflects its focus on earning client retention through results.

CrewBloom serves a wide range of industries, including SaaS, healthcare, dental, e-commerce, real estate, finance, hospitality, logistics, digital marketing, and law. Client feedback, available on Trustpilot, Clutch, and Glassdoor, points to consistent themes: professionalism, responsiveness, and measurable impact on day-to-day operations.

"We don't measure success by placements made," the spokesperson added. "We measure it by the businesses that grew because they finally had the right person in the right seat — and by the careers that changed because someone got the opportunity their skills always deserved."
