

The Ashalon Introduces a Modern Approach to Legacy Building Through Tangible Heritage Assets

London, United Kingdom Jul 21, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - The Ashalon Introduces a Modern Approach to Legacy Building Through Tangible Heritage Assets

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM – The Ashalon, a newly launched London-based legacy asset agency founded by Henry McDonald, is introducing a modern approach to legacy building through rare gemstones, numismatics, historical documents and tangible heritage assets.

The launch comes at a time when increasing amounts of wealth, communication and personal history are being stored digitally. The Ashalon was created to encourage the preservation of physical ownership, historical identity and tangible assets that can be passed from one generation to the next.

Founded by entrepreneur and collector Henry McDonald, The Ashalon combines collecting culture, heritage preservation and modern legacy building. The organisation specialises in sourcing meaningful physical assets that connect history, culture and long-term value.

"Many people are focused on digital ownership, but physical objects still tell some of the most important stories," said McDonald. "A gemstone, a historical document or an ancient coin can survive generations and provide a direct connection to history."

The Ashalon's growing estate includes rare gemstones, historical coins, banknotes and documents sourced through specialist networks and international contacts. The company believes that tangible assets offer an important counterbalance to an increasingly virtual world.

Operating from London, The Ashalon serves collectors, enthusiasts and individuals interested in preserving ownership, family history and cultural heritage through carefully selected physical assets.

Alongside sourcing and consulting services, The Ashalon plans to expand its educational initiatives through The Ashalon Journal, publishing content on collecting culture, heritage preservation, legacy building and the importance of tangible assets in the digital age.

The organisation's philosophy is captured by its slogan:

Freedom. Assets. Control.
