

America's Best Medicine Profiles Narbeh Petrossian, Pharm.D: Pharmacist, Entrepreneur, and CEO of PETROSSIAN PHARMACY

Advancing Patient-Centered Pharmacy Practice Through Clinical Leadership, Mental Health Advocacy, and Healthcare Innovation

Pharm.D., is a pharmacist, entrepreneur, and mental health advocate whose career reflects a commitment to advancing patient-centered healthcare through clinical excellence, community education, and pharmaceutical innovation. As CEO of PETROSSIAN PHARMACY, he is dedicated to improving access to quality care while empowering patients with education on medication safety, chronic disease management, and mental health awareness.

Born and raised in the university city of Uppsala, Sweden, Dr. Petrossian developed an early interest in science, chemistry, and medicine. Growing up in a Swedish-Armenian household, he balanced his academic pursuits with helping his family operate a pizzeria and grocery business. Those early experiences instilled a strong work ethic, entrepreneurial mindset, and lifelong appreciation for serving others. Before becoming a pharmacist, he spent seven to eight years working as a pharmacy technician and pharmacy clerk, gaining valuable frontline experience in patient care and pharmacy operations.

After relocating to the United States at age 18, Dr. Petrossian pursued pre-medical studies and earned a Bachelor of Arts in Biology from California State University, Northridge. He later received his Doctor of Pharmacy Degree from Western University of Health Sciences. While completing his graduate education, he also taught upper-division anatomy courses, an experience that strengthened his passion for healthcare education and mentoring future healthcare professionals.

Over the course of his career, Dr. Petrossian has built extensive experience across hospital, retail, long-term care, and community pharmacy settings. As an emergency room pharmacist with Adventist Health, he played a key role in developing an outpatient pharmacy program that ensured patients received their medications before hospital discharge. This initiative helped improve continuity of care, increase medication adherence, and reduce hospital readmissions. His professional experience also includes positions with Rite Aid, Ralphs Pharmacy, and leadership roles within independent pharmacies throughout California.

Mental health advocacy has become one of the defining aspects of Dr. Petrossian's professional mission. Having personally experienced treatment-resistant depression, he has chosen to openly share his story in hopes of encouraging others to seek support and understand that recovery is possible. Through patient education and public outreach, he raises awareness about innovative treatment options while promoting a more compassionate and human-centered approach to healthcare. He believes pharmacists play a vital role in supporting not only physical health but also emotional and psychological well-being.

Beyond his clinical practice, Dr. Petrossian has been recruited by pharmaceutical companies for Medical Science Liaison opportunities, contributing his expertise to clinical education and communication surrounding emerging therapies. Inspired by respected mentors, including Armenian-American businessman Kirk Kerkorian, he continues to pursue opportunities that unite scientific advancement, business leadership, and meaningful community service.

Dr. Petrossian's commitment to service extends beyond pharmacy practice. He was appointed by the Queen of Sweden to serve as a member of the Board of Directors for the Mentor Foundation and remains actively engaged with several professional organizations, including the California Pharmacists Association, the American Pharmacists Association, and the Armenian American Medical Society.

Driven by resilience, curiosity, and compassion, Dr. Narbeh Petrossian continues to advance the pharmacy profession while championing greater healthcare access, innovation, and mental health awareness. Through every stage of his career, he remains dedicated to helping patients achieve healthier lives through education, advocacy, and personalized care.
