

Bigger Stories for the Season's End: Dex System Publishing's Frontier & Conflict Picks

Frontier-adjacent conflict and history titles for readers drawn to harder-edged stories as summer winds down.

New York City, New York Jul 30, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - As the summer reading season starts to wind down, Dex System Publishing is turning to bigger, harder-edged stories — frontier and conflict fiction and nonfiction for readers ready for something weightier than the lighter fare that dominated the weeks around the Fourth of July.

From Khartoum to Kharg Island: The Long War for the Global Jugular by Liam Conrad returns to anchor the list, joined by History in Time: Middle East by Neville St Claire, Dull World by Jack Wilson, and E+Drive: The Good Ghost (A Tale of Choice) by Ronald Bartholomew.

"August is when readers tend to shift toward something with more weight," a Dex System spokesperson said. "This grouping is for the reader who's ready to trade the beach read for something that stays with them longer."

The feature pairs naturally with the earlier Semiquincentennial reading-list release for outlets building a 'history and reflection' cross-pitch, particularly given the continued relevance of America's 250th anniversary through the rest of the year.

This grouping is best suited to outlets covering history and current-affairs-adjacent fiction and nonfiction, rather than straight genre roundups, given its heavier subject matter relative to the rest of the August slate. Interview availability for Liam Conrad can be arranged on request.
