

Churches Paying $150 a Month for Software Now Have a Free Alternative in ChurchCMS

As subscription-based church software costs climb into the hundreds of dollars monthly, GegoSoft's ChurchCMS offers churches a fully featured, self-hosted alternative with no license fee attached.

NINE TOOLS. ONE PLATFORM.

Everything a Church Needs, Built In.

Chennai, Tamil Nadu Jul 2, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - A growing number of churches are re-examining their software budgets as subscription-based church management platforms continue raising prices, and GegoSoft Technologies says its free church management software, ChurchCMS, was built specifically for that moment.

Subscription platforms in this category commonly charge between thirty and over a hundred and fifty dollars a month depending on congregation size, a cost that can exceed fifteen hundred dollars a year once a church crosses a few hundred members. That figure typically does not include a separate church website, a live streaming tool, or a member notification system, each of which is often billed as a separate add-on. ChurchCMS includes all of these as part of a single, no-cost download.

The platform is released under the MIT open source license, meaning a church can download the complete source code, install it on standard web hosting, and use every included feature without a recurring payment. According to GegoSoft, the only ongoing cost for a self-hosted installation is the church's own hosting bill, typically a small fraction of what a subscription platform would charge for the same functionality.

"The pattern we kept hearing from churches was the same," a GegoSoft spokesperson said. "A platform is affordable in year one, and then the bill keeps climbing as the congregation grows. We wanted to remove that ceiling entirely by making the software itself free, permanently, regardless of how large a church becomes."

For churches without an in-house developer, GegoSoft also offers a one-time paid installation service and an optional fully managed hosting plan, though neither is required to use the platform. Churches can move between a self-hosted setup and managed hosting at any point without losing their membership data or starting over.

ChurchCMS includes a searchable member directory, event and small-group management, sermon archiving, live broadcast rooms, automated birthday and anniversary notifications, and an integrated online giving system, all accessible through both a web dashboard and a branded Android app for members. Congregations interested in comparing the platform against subscription alternatives can review the full services and setup options available.
