

Constitutional Crossroads: Dex System Explores Power, Law, and the Documents That Define a Nation

Titles in this release grapple with governance and sovereignty across genres

New York City, New York Jul 1, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - The document that founded the nation continues to shape debates 250 years later. Dex System's tenth Semiquincentennial release turns to titles wrestling with power, sovereignty, and the rules that bind — or fail to bind — those who govern.

Rane Corvus' Silicon Cross: 200 Centuries of Signal reimagines governance across an almost unimaginable timescale, following the evolution of authority and signal-based control long after the structures we recognize today have faded into myth. Garth Toxo's Soot and Sapphire and Frank Jackson's Raid Island explore crossroads moments where old rules meet new realities, each dramatizing the friction between inherited systems and the pressures of a changing world. Rounding out the list, Brooks Miller's Skin to Sea: The Zero-Latent Man examines questions of autonomy and identity under systems of control, offering a more intimate lens on the same themes of power and constraint.

Together, these titles invite readers to consider how founding principles — checks on power, consent of the governed, the balance between individual and state — continue to be tested and reinterpreted across radically different settings and timescales.
