

Dex System Unveils Its Ultimate Beach-Bag Sci-Fi Lineup for August

A five-title speculative-fiction lineup built for slow, unstructured summer days.

New Rochelle, New York Jul 30, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - With the Fourth of July now a few weeks behind and the rest of summer stretching out ahead, Dex System Publishing is spotlighting a beach-bag-ready slate of speculative fiction for August. The lineup leans into plot-forward storytelling designed for easy pickup and putdown — no notes to keep, no chapters to reread, and no plans beyond wherever the towel happens to be.

Titles include E+Drive by Ronald Bartholomew and Starman by Chad Winthrop, both offering expansive universes readers can sink into poolside or on a towel with nowhere to be. Rounding out the list are Dragon Beast: Magic of the Machine by Orion Graves and Neon Sanctuary by Marvin Hamner, two titles that trade on scale and momentum rather than density.

"Speculative fiction suits unstructured summer time because it asks nothing of the reader except attention," a Dex System spokesperson noted. "These are worlds built for wandering — the kind of reading that fits a season with no fixed schedule."

The feature is timed to align with the peak of the summer reading season, which typically runs from the Independence Day holiday through Labor Day. Outlets covering beach-read roundups or summer travel guides are encouraged to reach out for review copies or author availability.
