On July the 8th 2026. Serbian art rock and lyrical ballad guitarist Igor Lisul released "I Will Always Love You," a soft rock guitar instrumental that blends soulful, crying lead guitar with a deeply romantic melodic line.

Vojvodina, Serbia Jul 18, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Composed more than a decade ago, "I Will Always Love You" marks Igor's gentle return to rock instrumentals after focusing on lyrical ballads for the past year. The piece showcases his signature emotional phrasing and melodic sensitivity, conveying a narrative of true love entirely through instrumental expression. The track highlights Lisul's left-handed playing and expressive tone, anchored by tasteful dynamics and a vocal-like guitar lead that aims to connect directly with listeners' hearts.

"I waited until the moment felt right to share this song," said Igor Lisul. "This piece has lived with me for years. Releasing it now feels like offering a long-held letter to those who understand the language of melody and feeling."

A self-taught guitarist from Kikinda, Igor Lisul began playing at age 10 and refined his craft through intense daily practice and local touring across Vojvodina. He attended elementary music school to learn notation basics, developed a distinctive soloing style in his late teens, and gained national attention as a finalist on Serbia's Got Talent in 2010. He later reached the finals at the Guitar Art Expo in Belgrade (2011) and contributed music to art exhibitions in Belgrade and Novi Sad (2012). Igor cites 2020 and the release of his album "Pages Of Our Lives" as a true turning point in his recording career.
