

Spencer Svonavec and Rockwood Stone Donate and Construct New Bike and Hiker Entrance at Rockwood Trailhead

Spencer Svonavec completes and donates a new trailhead entrance to improve access for cyclists and hikers on the Great Allegheny Passage.

founder of Rockwood Stone, has fully constructed and donated a new and enhanced bike and hiker entrance at the Rockwood Trailhead of the Great Allegheny Passage (GAP). The project is now complete and open to the public. It was designed and built by Spencer Svonavec and the Rockwood Stone team to improve safety, visibility, and convenience for trail users at the Rockwood access point.

The Great Allegheny Passage spans 150 miles connecting Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania to Cumberland, Maryland, drawing thousands of cyclists, hikers, and outdoor enthusiasts each year. The Rockwood Trailhead serves as a key entry point along the route, and the new entrance constructed by Spencer Svonavec and Rockwood Stone enhances the experience for all who use it.

Spencer Svonavec funded, constructed, and donated the project in its entirety at no cost to the trail or the community.

"The Great Allegheny Passage is a treasure for this entire region, and Rockwood is lucky to be part of it," said Spencer Svonavec. "We wanted to make the Rockwood Trailhead a better, safer, more welcoming entry point for everyone who rides or hikes through here."

The new trailhead entrance is now open at the Rockwood GAP access point. For more information about the Great Allegheny Passage, visit gaptrail.org. For information about the Rockwood Trailhead, visit gaptrail.org/amenities/gap-access-and-parking-rockwood.

About Rockwood Stone: Rockwood Stone is a Somerset County, Pennsylvania aggregate producer founded by Spencer Svonavec. The company is a Pennsylvania-certified Type A, Class E Aggregate Producer supplying contractors, municipalities, and developers throughout the region. For more information, visit www.rockwoodstone.net or follow Rockwood Stone on Facebook at facebook.com/people/Rockwood-Stone/61579118229995.

Media Contact

Spencer Svonavec

@gmail.com

<http://spencersvonavec.com>

Source : www.spencersvonavec.com

See on IssueWire