STORYXEN CHANGES THE GAME. storyxen.com

Colorado Springs, Colorado Jul 22, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - StoryXen Studios today announced the launch of StoryXen, a patent-pending production intelligence and consequence-management platform designed to connect every stage of film and television production.

Unlike conventional production-management tools that operate as separate applications, StoryXen brings script breakdowns, scheduling, budgeting, storyboarding, crew management, compliance and production reporting into one interconnected platform.

When a script, location, schedule, cast member or production requirement changes, StoryXen identifies how that decision may affect the budget, schedule, crew and other departments. Authorized users can see those consequences in real time, reducing the communication delays and fragmented information that can lead to costly production errors.

“Film productions do not need another disconnected tool,” said Stephen A. O’Hearn, founder and CEO of StoryXen Studios. “They need a production intelligence platform that shows what changed, who is affected and what happens next. StoryXen gives productions one source of truth from script to screen.”

One platform, tailored to every production role

StoryXen features a role-based interface that gives each authorized user access to the information relevant to their responsibilities. Crew members, department heads, producers, studio executives and investors can work from the same underlying production data while viewing the controls and insights appropriate to their roles.

The platform is designed to scale from independent productions to studio-level slates, providing leadership with real-time visibility into production status, schedule performance, budget exposure, compliance and operational risk.

StoryXen's capabilities include:

- AI-assisted script ingestion and breakdowns
- Drag-and-drop scheduling and stripboards
- Production budgeting and Movie Magic-compatible exports
- Automated call sheets, daily sides and production reports
- Crew onboarding, timecards and payroll management
- Union-compliance workflows and SAG-AFTRA Exhibit G support
- Storyboarding, casting assistance and previsualization
- Job boards and film-friendly vendor resources
- Change notifications, approval workflows and impact analysis
- Studio-level dashboards for individual productions and entire slates
- AI provenance tracking for ownership, permissions and chain of custody

Built around consequences—not isolated tasks

Traditional applications such as StudioBinder, Yamdu, Wrapbook and Movie Magic address important pieces of production. StoryXen was developed around a broader challenge: connecting those pieces so information can move across the production without being repeatedly reentered, reconciled or communicated through disconnected systems.

StoryXen's consequence-management engine is designed to reveal the downstream effects of production decisions before they become expensive surprises.

"Every production decision has consequences," O'Hearn added. "Every consequence should be visible."

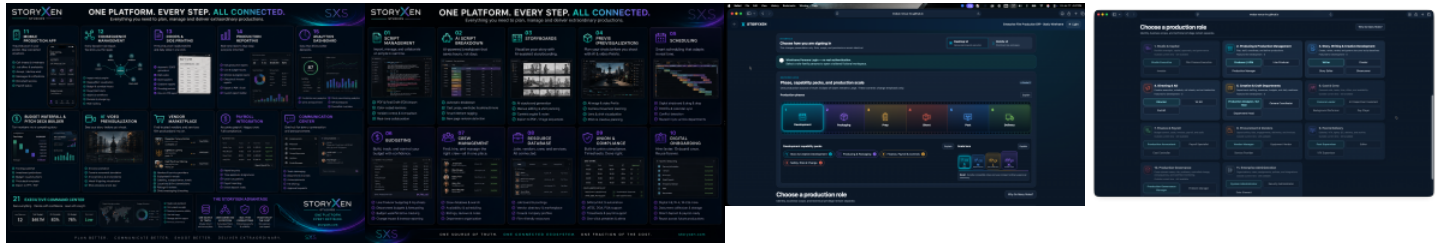

StoryXen has already attracted interest from production companies and studio-level organizations seeking more integrated, scalable production infrastructure. The company is currently offering demonstrations to filmmakers, producers, production companies and entertainment studios.
