Wellington, New Zealand Jul 14, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Sam Neill, the New Zealand actor widely known for his role in the 'Jurassic Park' movies, has died at the age of 78. On Monday, his family shared the news with everyone. His family shared a statement on Instagram that said, 'Sam was surrounded by family and passed with the dignity that has characterized his whole life. The loss was sudden and unexpected but blessed by the fact that Sam remained cancer free'. They haven't said what caused his death but made sure that it wasn't cancer.

Neill was suffering from blood cancer for many years, and he was under treatment throughout all those years. This April, there was an announcement that he was cancer-free after years of treatment. And now, suddenly, he died, which was quite unexpected. The actor was staying in Sydney, and the incident took place there as well. In the 1993 Steven Spielberg movie, 'Jurassic Park', he played the role of paleontologist Dr. Alan Grant. He got massive appreciation for this specific role. It also led him to gain international appreciation as well.

He was globally known as one of the talented actors. The New Zealand Prime Minister, Christopher Luxon, also praised his acting and his impact on New Zealand and abroad. He even called him 'one of the greats', which is one of the biggest appreciations that anyone can have. On X, Luxon wrote 'For more than fifty years he took New Zealand stories to the world and his talents helped make our film industry into what it is today — one of our greatest cultural exports’.

On the other hand, the Australian Prime Minister, Anthony Albanese, has stated that Neill had ‘earned a special place in Australian hearts. Wry and dry, thoughtful and laconic, Sam fought illness with the same dignity, humor and conviction that gave strength to his every performance’. Toni Collette starred with Neill in ‘A Long Way Down’ and ‘Dirty Deeds’. She posted a picture of them on Instagram and wrote, ‘I love you, dear Sam. You hero. You legend’. This incident has truly shaken the industry.
