

Unplug to Think: Dex System Publishing's AI Reads for a Slow August

Machine-consciousness and System OS titles for readers unplugging from their own screens.

New Rochelle, New York Jul 30, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - In a fitting bit of irony, Dex System Publishing is spotlighting its machine-consciousness and System OS-adjacent titles as slow-paced reading for readers stepping away from their devices this August, after weeks of holiday travel and Fourth of July connectivity.

The feature includes Elysium: The AI Conundrum by Buddi T: GAL and Echoes of the Machine: Humanity's Programmed Past by Blake Edwards, alongside Commander in the Chief House by James Essex and Choke Point by Garrison West. Each title approaches artificial intelligence from a different angle — conundrum, history, culture, and theory.

"There's something fitting about reading books on artificial intelligence while intentionally putting your phone down," a Dex System spokesperson said. "It's a way of engaging with the subject on your own terms, instead of through a feed."

The release is positioned to reach tech and futurism press as much as traditional book-trade outlets, tying naturally back to the Dex System imprint itself. Outlets covering AI, technology, or digital culture are especially encouraged to consider this feature given its direct relevance to the imprint's own creative engine.

Cross-promotion with the Dex System imprint is a natural fit here, since the topic of these four titles overlaps directly with the technology behind Dex System's own publishing process.
