THEY'RE TRYING TO MAKE US SLAVES AGAIN...

AND THIS IS HOW WE STOP THEM.

HENRY E. REAVES III, ESQ.

Memphis, Tennessee Aug 18, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - Attorney, entrepreneur, military veteran, filmmaker, and community leader Attorney Henry E. Reaves III, Esq. has announced the release of his groundbreaking new book, They're Trying to Make Us Slaves Again: This Is How We Stop Them, a bold and solution-driven guide designed to help African Americans reclaim control of their communities, strengthen economic independence, and build a sustainable future through unity and strategic action.

While many books have documented the historical challenges facing Black America, Attorney Henry E. Reaves III, Esq. believes the time has come to move beyond diagnosis and focus on implementation.

"This book is not another discussion about the problem," said Attorney Henry E. Reaves III, Esq. "It is a blueprint for solutions. It is a practical roadmap for individuals, families, churches, educators, business owners, elected officials, and community leaders who are ready to take meaningful action."

The book confronts generations of systemic challenges that have impacted Black communities, including economic exclusion, educational disparities, political disenfranchisement, family instability, and institutional dependency. However, unlike many publications on these topics, Attorney Henry E. Reaves III, Esq. offers a detailed step-by-step framework for overcoming those barriers through collective action, ownership, education, and organization.

At the heart of the book is a message that Attorney Henry E. Reaves III, Esq., has championed throughout his career: Unity is the foundation of empowerment.

Drawing upon decades of experience as an attorney, entrepreneur, military veteran, filmmaker, and community advocate, Attorney Henry E. Reaves III, Esq. presents what he describes as one of the most comprehensive plans for Black advancement in modern times. His blueprint focuses on rebuilding community infrastructure through education, economic ownership, political engagement, family restoration, faith-based leadership, and institution building.

The book also introduces readers to SONU (Save Our Neighborhoods United), a community-focused organization established to help execute the principles outlined throughout the book.

"SONU was created because awareness alone is not enough," said Reaves. "We need action. We need organization. We need measurable outcomes. Most importantly, we need unity. When our communities unite around common goals, we become stronger economically, politically, and socially."

Through SONU, Attorney Henry E. Reaves III, Esq. seeks to educate, mobilize, and empower communities by providing resources, leadership development, strategic planning, and practical tools that support long-term community growth and sustainability.

A central component of the book is Project 2035, an ambitious initiative aimed at helping Black communities achieve measurable progress in wealth creation, education, business ownership, civic participation, and community development over the next decade.

According to Attorney Henry E. Reaves III, Esq., the challenges facing Black America are urgent, but so are the solutions.

"The problems are urgent. The solutions must be equally urgent," he explains in the book. "Freedom is not given. Freedom is organized. Freedom is built."

The powerful imagery featured on the book cover—a chain being shattered apart—symbolizes the breaking of economic, political, and social barriers that have historically limited opportunities within Black communities. It serves as a visual representation of the book's core message: liberation requires strategy, discipline, ownership, and collective commitment.

Community leaders, educators, pastors, coaches, entrepreneurs, and young adults seeking practical pathways toward empowerment will find actionable guidance throughout the book's ten-step framework.

Rather than simply asking what is wrong, Attorney Henry E. Reaves III, Esq. challenges readers to ask a more important question:

What can we do together to build the future we deserve?

With the release of They're Trying to Make Us Slaves Again: This Is How We Stop Them, Attorney Henry E. Reaves III, Esq. offers a compelling answer—one rooted in unity, economic empowerment, education, and community-driven solutions.
