One page per story shows the left, centre and right accounts side by side, with every source listed, three independent bias ratings published unaveraged, and no subscription.

The screenshot shows the MediaBias News website interface. At the top, there's a navigation bar with "LATEST" stories, a search bar, and a "Saved" button. Below this is a category bar with "All Stories", "Politics", "Conflict & Security" (highlighted), "Business & Economy", "Science & Tech", "Health", "Climate", and "Media". The main article is titled "Denmark extends military service to 11 months as Princess Isabella enlists" under the "CONFLICT & SECURITY" category. It mentions "64 outlets ran this" and "4 min read". The article text states: "Around 1,600 conscripts began training on 3 August 2026, with women making up one-fifth of the intake." On the right, there's a section "WHICH OUTLETS, BY LEANING" with three columns: LEFT (11 outlets), CENTRE (31 outlets), and RIGHT (27 outlets). Each column shows a list of outlet logos and a count. Below this is a "NOT RATED - 29" section with more outlet logos and a count of +18.

London, England Aug 6, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - MediaBias News, a free news comparison site, has launched with a single premise: put the left, centre and right accounts of the same story on one page and let readers see the difference themselves.

Each story page lists every outlet that covered it, the political spectrum split across those outlets, and three scores: Trust, measuring corroboration and evidence; Craft, measuring context and the separation of fact from comment; and Hype, measuring presentation against substance. A recent story on explosions at Dubai's Jebel Ali industrial area drew 32 sources and a Trust score of 64. Another, on calls for refugee status for Jewish Canadians, drew 23 sources with a spectrum split of 73% left, 27% centre and no right-of-centre coverage at all.

The site takes an unusual position on bias ratings. It carries ratings from AllSides, Ad Fontes Media and Media Bias/Fact Check, and publishes all three separately rather than averaging them.

"They frequently disagree with each other," the methodology page states, "and we publish every rating we hold for an outlet rather than averaging them into one number that would conceal it."

MediaBias News is built and run by one person. "I'm an open source developer, not a journalist," said Valentin-Adrian Neagu, its founder. "I've read every story in three or four places since I was a kid, and I wanted it on one page. I built it for myself, and it turns out a fair number of people read that way."

The site is transparent about its use of AI. Language models assess the coverage and draft the summaries; human editors write the model instructions, set the rejection thresholds and carry the accountability. There are no invented bylines and no original reporting — every story links out to the outlets that did the work.

Its methodology page is unusually candid about limits: "The scores are judgements, not measurements. Two careful editors would disagree at the margins, and so would two runs of a model."

MediaBias News is free to read, with no paywall, no registration and no article limit. Coverage spans Politics, Conflict & Security, Business & Economy, Science & Tech, Health, Climate and Media, across international, US, UK, European and Canadian editions.
