

Fall Equinox Escapes: E-Drive and Ocean Moon Offer Two Ways to Disappear Into a New World

As days and nights balance out, Dex System Publishing pairs its recurring anchor title with Rane Corvus's atmospheric Ocean Moon.

Seattle Hill-Silver Firs, Washington Sep 2, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - With the fall equinox approaching, Dex System Publishing is spotlighting two titles built for readers looking to lose themselves in a new world: E-Drive: The Good Ghost, A Tale of Choice by Ronald Bartholomew and Ocean Moon by Rane Corvus.

E-Drive returns once again as the catalog's recurring anchor title, a role it has held across nearly every campaign Dex System Publishing has run this year. Ronald Bartholomew's ongoing series continues to explore the weight of choice, and September's pairing gives readers a fresh entry point into the story ahead of the season's busiest reading months.

Ocean Moon, meanwhile, offers a very different kind of escape — one shaped by tides, atmosphere, and the pull of forces larger than any single character. Rane Corvus's prose style, familiar to readers of the Sync Series, continues to draw comparisons for its immersive, sensory world-building.

Together, the two titles reflect the range Dex System Publishing aims to offer every month: one story rooted in ongoing consequence, one built for a single atmospheric plunge. Both are available now in multiple formats.

The timing is deliberate. As the equinox brings the year's daylight and darkness into balance, Dex

System Publishing sees a natural parallel in these two stories — one that keeps moving forward chapter after chapter, and one that asks readers to sit still long enough to feel the pull of the tide. Readers who have followed E-Drive since earlier in the year will find the latest chapter builds directly on what came before, while newcomers to Ocean Moon can step in without any prior context. Both approaches reflect Dex System Publishing's ongoing effort to give readers multiple ways into its catalog, whether they're joining a series in progress or picking up a standalone world for the first time.
