

Podcast Host Ramin Ismaili Explores Courage and Justice with Author Dwoeen Ngakie on "Agent of Laughter"

New episode dives into positivity, perseverance, and standing up against injustice — as Ismaili's own book, Rules of Laughter, is set to be featured at the Frankfurt Book Fair 2026.

of Laughter, welcomes author Dwoeen Ngakie in the show's latest episode, "Finding Courage in the Face of Injustice with Dwoeen Ngakie," a candid conversation about positive mindset, courage, perseverance, and purpose.

In the episode, Ngakie shares the inspiration behind his book Equity Whispers, speaks to the importance of family and gratitude, and discusses why standing up against injustice takes courage. He also reads a powerful excerpt from his book.

"This conversation with Dwoeen reminded me that courage and joy aren't opposites — they grow from the same root," said Ismaili. "His story about standing up for what's right, while still holding onto gratitude and family, is exactly the kind of message this show exists to share."

Agent of Laughter brings listeners weekly conversations with authors, entrepreneurs, and everyday heroes who have turned challenges into joy and mindset into success, hosted by Ramin Ismaili, known to his audience as the Agent of Laughter.

The episode's release also comes amid exciting news for Ismaili: his book, Rules of Laughter, will be featured at the Frankfurt Book Fair 2026, one of the world's largest and most influential publishing events, further extending the reach of his message of positivity and resilience to a global audience.

About Ramin Ismaili

Ramin Ismaili is an American artist, author, gemologist, and health coach whose work centers on positivity, creativity, and laughter. A longtime member of New York's Diamond District and creator of the Linerism art technique, Ismaili draws on decades of professional experience, personal reflection, and humor in his writing.
