

September Sci-Fi Spotlight Pairs Dragon Beast and Ocean Moon in a Double Feature of Machines and Myth

Orion Graves and Rane Corvus bring two very different visions of a technology-shaped future to Dex System Publishing's fall lineup.

Swains Island, American Samoa Sep 2, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - This week, Dex System Publishing turns its September spotlight toward two titles that blend speculative technology with older, stranger forces: Dragon Beast: Magic of the Machine by Orion Graves and Ocean Moon by Rane Corvus.

Dragon Beast: Magic of the Machine imagines a world where ancient myth and mechanized power collide, following characters who must decide whether the old legends still have a place inside new engines. Orion Graves builds a story where creatures of folklore and feats of engineering are never quite separable — and where the line between magic and machinery blurs with every chapter.

Ocean Moon, from Rane Corvus, carries forward the atmospheric, high-concept storytelling readers have come to expect from the author's Sync Series. Set against a backdrop where tides and technology answer to the same pull, Ocean Moon follows characters navigating a world reshaped by forces beyond their control, in prose that moves as restlessly as the sea it's named for.

Both novels reflect Dex System Publishing's continued commitment to genre-spanning storytelling, built through its proprietary Dex System creative engine and released under the AM I AM imprint. Readers can find Dragon Beast and Ocean Moon now across major retailers.

As always, Dex System Publishing encourages readers to explore the full catalog at ciphergrid.net,
