GalleryDock Offers Three Free Online Client Galleries for Photographers

The platform combines client photo delivery with password protection and gallery embedding on photographers' own websites.

Hannover, Niedersachsen Oct 4, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - GalleryDock is offering photographers a free account with which they can create up to three online client galleries. The Hannover-based software company provides a way to present photographs and share them with clients, with password protection and website embedding among the platform's gallery features.

The offering gives photographers an entry point for using dedicated client galleries alongside an existing website. Instead of using a public portfolio to present every client assignment, photographers can organize photographs in separate galleries for the people who need to view them. Typical uses include wedding photographs, family portraits and commercial photography projects.

Password protection for client galleries

GalleryDock supports password-protected galleries, allowing photographers to restrict access to photographs shared with clients. A gallery link can be provided together with the access information, so the photographer can decide which recipients receive it. This is useful when finished images are intended for a particular client rather than a general website audience.

The gallery workflow also supports client image selections and digital downloads. Photographers can present a shoot for review, collect the client's choices and make photographs available for delivery.

These functions bring image presentation and client interaction into one online gallery environment.

Further information about gallery password protection is available at https://gallerydock.com/en/password-protected-client-gallery-for-photographers.

Embed a gallery into an existing website

Photographers can use an embed code to display a GalleryDock gallery within their own website. The integration lets them add a gallery to an existing page while continuing to manage the gallery through GalleryDock. It provides an option for photographers who want their website to support client delivery as well as introduce their work to prospective customers.

Embedding instructions and further information are available at https://gallerydock.com/en/how-to-embed-a-free-photo-gallery-on-your-website.

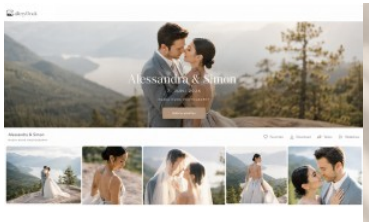

Start with three free galleries

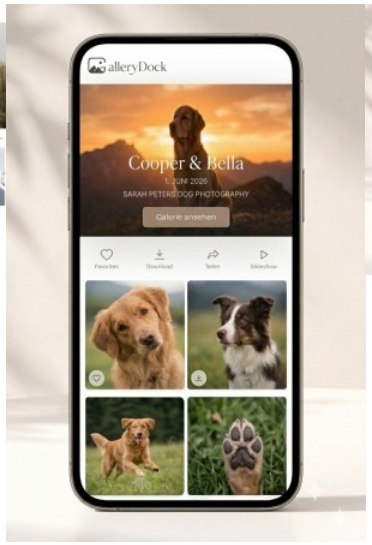

The free account allows users to create up to three galleries and get started with GalleryDock's online gallery workflow. Additional features and usage limits depend on the selected plan. Photographers can review the available options before deciding whether their work requires a different plan.

GalleryDock is accessible online around the clock. The platform also includes print shop functionality for photographers and video feedback tools for filmmakers, extending its use to other stages of creative client work.

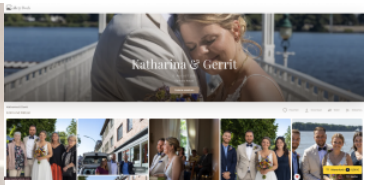

About GalleryDock

GalleryDock develops online client gallery software for photographers and filmmakers. Based in Hannover, Germany, the company serves users internationally. Its software supports photo presentation, image selections, digital delivery, password protection and website embedding. Product and account information is available at https://gallerydock.com/.

Media Contact

GalleryDock – Edmond Rätzel

@gallerydock.com

+49 511 27909377

Karmarschstraße 16, 30159 Hannover, Germany

https://gallerydock.com/

Source : GalleryDock

See on IssueWire