

London Book of World Records Recognizes Royal House of Kanaani, Linking Cats to King Solomon's Throne

Seven documented purebred Kanaani cats earn world record recognition as the Royal House of Kanaani revives the symbolic heritage of King Solomon's Golden Cat and his legendary throne.

UNITED KINGDOM CERTIFICATE

CERTIFICATE OF WORLD RECORD

This Certificate is Proudly Presented to

MIKHAIL SALITA

"For the Most Documented Purebred Kanaani Cats in the World — Seven (7) Cats"
Founder and Royal Custodian of the Royal House of Kanaani

The London Book of World Records recognizes Mikhail Salita, Rabbi and Animal Chaplain of Brooklyn, New York, USA, for documenting seven purebred Kanaani cats registered with the World Cat Federation (WCF). This recognition also honors his research into the symbolic historical and theological connection between the Kanaani breed and King Solomon's golden royal cat, described in Targum Sheni to the Book of Esther, and his establishment of the Royal House of Kanaani, whose members are symbolically designated "Heirs to King Solomon's Feline Throne." His achievement represents a contribution to feline heritage preservation, cultural restitution, and the revival of a symbolic royal tradition associated with Jerusalem and the Holy Land.

London Book of World Records Recognizes Seven Purebred Kanaani Cats and Royal House of Kanaani's Symbolic Connection to King Solomon's Golden Cat

International world record recognition celebrates the preservation of a rare Israeli cat breed, the revival of King Solomon's symbolic royal feline heritage, and Jewish cultural restitution.

London Book of World Records and the World Kanaani Organization (TWKO) announce the recognition of Rabbi Mikhail Salita, an American rabbi, Animal Chaplain, and Founder and Royal Custodian of the Royal House of Kanaani, for documenting seven purebred Kanaani cats registered with the World Cat Federation (WCF).

The achievement has been recognized under the world record designation "The Most Documented Purebred Kanaani Cats in the World — Seven (7)."

Beyond the world record, the recognition acknowledges the Royal House of Kanaani's symbolic cultural and theological connection to the legendary golden royal cat depicted on the throne of King Solomon, King of Israel, as described in the Jewish text Targum Sheni to the Book of Esther.

King Solomon's Golden Cat and the Revival of Royal Feline Heritage

The Kanaani, a rare cat breed originating in Jerusalem, Israel, has acquired a renewed symbolic royal identity through the Royal House of Kanaani.

According to Targum Sheni, King Solomon's magnificent throne featured representations of various animals, including a golden cat. This Jewish literary tradition provides the theological and cultural foundation for the modern symbolic royal identity of the Kanaani breed.

Through his research and preservation efforts, Rabbi Salita has established a symbolic cultural connection between this ancient royal feline imagery and the modern Jerusalem-origin Kanaani breed.

The Royal House of Kanaani and its feline members carry the distinguished symbolic royal designation:

"Heirs to King Solomon's Feline Throne."

This recognition honors the symbolic restoration of Israel's royal feline heritage, representing cultural and theological continuity rather than a claim of documented biological descent.

Cultural Restitution, Animal Spirituality and Compassion

The recognition represents a significant milestone in Rabbi Salita's mission to restore awareness of Israel's ancient royal feline symbolism through cultural restitution and preservation.

By connecting a rare modern Israeli cat breed with the legendary golden cat of King Solomon's throne, the Royal House of Kanaani seeks to revive a distinctive element of Jewish spiritual and cultural heritage and preserve its symbolic meaning for future generations.

The initiative reflects the Jewish ethical principle of Tza'ar Ba'alei Chayim, emphasizing the responsibility to prevent unnecessary suffering among animals.

These values resonate with broader spiritual traditions of compassion, including the Indian principles of Ahimsa and Jeev Daya, promoting kindness, dignity, and respect for all living creatures.

The recognition highlights the intersection of rare breed preservation, Jewish spirituality, cultural restitution, animal welfare, and humanity's shared responsibility toward the natural world.

International Preservation of the Kanaani Breed

Developed in Jerusalem during the 1990s, the Kanaani remains a rare Israeli cat breed.

Rabbi Salita's preservation initiative focuses on maintaining documented breeding lines, supporting international feline registration, and promoting public awareness of the breed's origins and cultural significance.

The seven documented purebred Kanaani cats recognized by London Book of World Records represent an important milestone in this ongoing preservation effort.

Through the World Kanaani Organization (TWKO) and the Royal House of Kanaani, Rabbi Salita seeks to strengthen international cooperation in breed preservation, cultural education, responsible breeding, and animal welfare.

Together, the world record and the recognition of symbolic royal feline heritage represent a continuing effort to preserve a rare Israeli breed while restoring awareness of a distinctive element of Jewish cultural memory.
