Promote Your Music Now

Music Day YouTube Growth Campaign, a seasonal initiative for independent musicians seeking to promote eligible music videos through targeted YouTube advertising.

Available from October 4 through October 12, 2026, the campaign includes a 15% price reduction on eligible YouTube promotion packages. Following International Music Day on October 1, the initiative provides advertising support for artists planning music video campaigns during the autumn release season.

Music Promotion Club has worked with independent artists, record labels, artist managers, DJs, and other music professionals since 2014. Its YouTube promotion services allow clients to submit a music video or channel link, select an intended audience and geography, and choose an advertising budget aligned with their campaign goals.

Campaigns may be configured around factors such as music genre, target location, audience interests, available budget, video content, and advertising objectives. According to the company, artists can review available audience and performance information through YouTube Analytics to assess how viewers respond to their promoted content.

“Independent artists often have strong music and visual content but need a practical way to introduce that work to listeners outside their existing audience,” said a spokesperson for Music Promotion Club. “This campaign is focused on giving artists access to structured YouTube advertising support, clear targeting options, and measurable campaign activity during the fall release season.”

Eligible campaigns use Google Ads placements on YouTube and eligible partner inventory. Advertising remains subject to applicable platform policies, creative review, audience availability, budget, and campaign settings. Campaigns generally begin after payment and creative review, with timing dependent on platform approval requirements.

Packages include advertising spend and campaign setup, according to the company’s service information. Estimated advertising delivery is displayed during campaign selection and is based on historical advertising data. These estimates are projections rather than guaranteed results. Actual delivery may vary depending on targeting, budget, content, market conditions, viewer availability, and platform activity.

Music Promotion Club states that it does not sell artificial views, likes, or subscribers. The company notes that subscriber growth, engagement, revenue, chart results, and other outcomes are not guaranteed and depend on the content, audience response, and campaign configuration.

Optional services are also available for artists seeking broader campaign support, including sponsored content opportunities, paid press-release distribution, music blog placements, artist interviews, and digital magazine features. Where applicable, sponsored placements are presented as paid promotional content. These services are separate from the announced YouTube promotion campaign.

The International Music Day YouTube Growth Campaign is open to eligible artists worldwide from October 4 through October 12, 2026. Artists can review package information and contact the company for clarification on campaign eligibility before placing an order.
