

Royal Guest Ringside: Princess Haya Could Attend Salita Promotions' November 7 Boxing Event on DAZN

A symbolic heir to the Golden Cat adorning King Solomon's magnificent throne, Princess Haya of the Royal House of Kanaani is a WCF No. 1-ranked Kanaani Kitten/Junior and world record holder who could appear ringside in New Mexico.

Brooklyn, New York Oct 26, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - WCF World No. 1-ranked Kanaani Kitten/Junior, world record holder, and member of the Royal House of Kanaani, Princess Haya could attend Salita Promotions' November 7 championship boxing event in New Mexico as a VIP ringside guest.

Recognition from London Book of World Records acknowledges the Royal House's symbolic connection to King Solomon's throne, adding an international milestone to an American breed revival and a Hollywood-worthy story connecting two Brooklyn brothers.

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK / ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO — October 25, 2026 — Championship boxing has its kings, its crowns, and its legendary entrances. This November, an entirely different kind of royal guest could bring a story stretching from Jerusalem and the magnificent throne of biblical King Solomon to the bright lights of an American boxing arena.

Royal Princess Haya of the Royal House of Kanaani could attend the November 7 championship boxing event in Albuquerque, New Mexico, as a VIP ringside guest. A world record holder who reached No. 1 in the World Cat Federation's 2026 Kanaani Kitten/Junior breed standings following her international debut in Finland, Haya represents an exceptionally rare Israeli breed and an American mission to preserve its future. The event is scheduled to stream internationally on DAZN. Her attendance remains under consideration; no official appearance or broadcast participation has been confirmed.

A symbolic heir to the Golden Cat adorning King Solomon's magnificent throne, the young princess could introduce audiences to an unusual meeting of worlds: championship sport, biblical heritage, royal symbolism, and the preservation of an endangered breed. Her possible presence offers a distinctive human-interest story alongside the action in the ring.

FROM JERUSALEM TO AN AMERICAN REVIVAL

The Kanaani is Israel's only national cat breed, a rare living heritage on the brink of extinction. According to the preservation initiative's documentation, it has been officially recognized as the rarest cat breed in the world by three record organizations: Official World Records, Noble World Records, and Record Holders Republic.

Developed in Jerusalem by Doris Pollatschek during the 1990s, the breed took inspiration from the natural feline appearance associated with the landscape of the Holy Land. Its preservation story has since crossed borders, bringing surviving Israeli breeding lines into an American revival effort led by Rabbi Mikhail Salita in Brooklyn.

An ordained rabbi and ordained Animal Chaplain, Salita approaches this work as both a preservation responsibility and a spiritual calling. Through the American Kanaani Revival Program and the World Kanaani Organization (TWKO), he has brought together documentation, international exhibitions, education, and cultural outreach to introduce the breed to new audiences.

For Salita, seeing these cats gain international recognition after facing an uncertain future carries the sense of a small miracle unfolding before our eyes: a vulnerable living heritage finding new custodians, renewed visibility, and a chance to flourish.

LONDON BOOK OF WORLD RECORDS RECOGNIZES ROYAL HOUSE OF KANAANI, LINKING CATS TO KING SOLOMON'S THRONE

In October 2026, London Book of World Records recognized Rabbi Mikhail Salita for documenting seven purebred Kanaani cats under the record designation "The Most Documented Purebred Kanaani Cats in the World — Seven (7)." The organization also acknowledged the Royal House of Kanaani and its symbolic cultural connection to the Golden Cat adorning King Solomon's magnificent royal throne.

The acknowledgment brought together two defining elements of the initiative: the documentation and preservation of an exceptionally rare Israeli breed, and the symbolic royal tradition inspired by Jerusalem's cultural and spiritual heritage. For the Royal House, it marked an international milestone in the recognition of its preservation work and cultural identity.

London Book of World Records joins Official World Records, Noble World Records, Record Holders Republic, and Ukraine's Unified Database of Ukrainian Records among the five organizations that have recognized different achievements associated with the Kanaani initiative. These recognitions concern rarity, preservation, documentation, exhibition results, and the Royal House's symbolic cultural mission.

A separate application involving seven documented Kanaani cats awaits an independent decision from Guinness World Records.

THE GOLDEN CAT AND THE SPLENDOR OF SOLOMON'S THRONE

At the center of the Royal House's symbolism stands a striking image from Jewish literary tradition. Targum Sheni, an interpretive work associated with the Book of Esther, describes a golden cat facing a golden rooster among the animal figures adorning King Solomon's magnificent throne.

The image evokes the grandeur of Solomon's royal court, where representations of the animal world contributed to the throne's extraordinary splendor. For Salita, it also offers a theological starting point for considering how humanity honors and protects living creatures today.

The Kanaani emerged in Jerusalem—the same city associated with Solomon's kingship—and shares the geographical homeland where cats lived in his time. The Royal House of Kanaani celebrates that continuity through a symbolic heritage rooted in place, cultural memory, and preservation.

Within this tradition, Princess Haya and her royal family are honored as symbolic heirs to the Golden Cat adorning King Solomon's throne. For the Royal House, the Kanaani holds a unique place as the bearer of this symbolism: a Jerusalem-born breed carrying a contemporary expression of the city's royal heritage.

Salita presents this connection as a contemporary theological rediscovery, bringing an ancient literary image into conversation with the urgent preservation of a living Israeli breed. The splendor of the throne becomes an inspiration for present-day care, giving the Royal House's pageantry a deeper purpose.

THE CROWN OF COMPASSION

That purpose finds its fullest expression in the Crown of Compassion, the guiding ideal of the Royal House of Kanaani. Inspired by the highest ethical traditions of the Torah and Talmud concerning kindness toward living creatures and the prevention of animal suffering, it places responsibility at the heart of royal dignity.

The crown represents a commitment to protect vulnerable life. The preservation mission gives that commitment practical form through the care, documentation, and safeguarding of the Kanaani breed.

This message reaches beyond any single religious community. Compassion, stewardship, and the hope of preserving something precious are themes that cross cultures. A rare feline princess may first attract attention through her beauty and royal story; the deeper invitation is to care about the living heritage she represents.

A WORLD NO. 1 FOLLOWING HER FINNISH DEBUT

Princess Haya's international journey reached a milestone in August 2026 at a two-day World Cat Federation exhibition in Vantaa, Finland. Following that debut, she reached No. 1 in the WCF Best Cat 2026 Kanaani Kitten/Junior breed standings, earning 407 points, two CACP certificates, Excellent 1 evaluations, Best in Show nominations, and fifth place in the WCF Kitten Ring.

Her mother, Queen Haifa, simultaneously reached No. 1 in the adult Kanaani breed standings. Both positions concern the Kanaani breed within their respective age categories. One international exhibition had brought two generations of the same feline family to the top of their breed rankings.

The mother-and-daughter achievement received recognition from Record Holders Republic and was entered into Ukraine's Unified Database of Ukrainian Records under record number AQ6013BR. For the preservation initiative, their results marked a significant return to the international exhibition stage.

Now, the young princess whose journey took her from Brooklyn to Finland could be approaching a very different kind of debut: a possible ringside welcome at an American championship boxing event.

TWO BROOKLYN BROTHERS AND A HOLLYWOOD-WORTHY STORY

Behind the possible appearance lies a family story with an unexpected twist. Dmitriy Salita, a former professional boxer and founder of Salita Promotions, built his career in championship boxing. His brother, Rabbi Mikhail Salita, pursued education, religious service, animal chaplaincy, and the preservation of an exceptionally rare breed.

Their paths became connected when Dmitriy's personal network helped Mikhail reach individuals associated with surviving Kanaani breeding lines in Israel. Introductions through Evgeniy Ryvkin and Gleb led to Lyudmila Vlasova, whose cats became central to the American revival initiative.

Now, a young representative of that revival could attend an event promoted by the very brother whose connections helped make it possible. The story brings together the ingredients of a film: Jerusalem, Brooklyn, an endangered breed, an international journey, and two brothers whose ambitions unexpectedly meet again.

For Rabbi Salita, there is also a quiet spiritual significance in that reunion. Against the Talmudic teaching that associates the destruction of the Second Temple with baseless hatred, brotherly affection and mutual support offer a hopeful counterpoint. Coming together becomes a modest expression of unity—and, in his understanding, an opportunity for blessing and the beginning of something larger.

CHAMPIONSHIP BOXING AND AN UNEXPECTED ROYAL GUEST

The November 7 event at Albuquerque's Kiva Auditorium is scheduled to feature Abraham Perez defending his WBA Interim Flyweight World Championship against Yankiel Rivera, with Atif Oberlton facing Deon Nicholson on the supporting card. Promoted by Salita Promotions and Legacy Boxing Promotions in association with Wynn Records, the evening is scheduled to stream internationally on DAZN, with Teddy Atlas and Brian Custer on commentary.

Princess Haya's possible presence could add an unexpected dimension to the occasion: the elegance of a rare royal guest, the intrigue of a Jerusalem-born breed, and a story inspired by one of the most celebrated kings in biblical tradition. A respectful welcome, a photograph, or a chance encounter could become a memorable moment for sports fans, animal lovers, and audiences drawn to extraordinary stories.

A formal presentation would not be necessary for the visit to matter. Even a private VIP ringside attendance, with arrangements suited to Haya's comfort and care, could mark a significant new chapter for the Royal House of Kanaani.

Through its Kanaani Diplomacy initiative, TWKO hopes such encounters can encourage cultural exchange, preservation partnerships, and philanthropic interest. The ambition is to turn curiosity into lasting support for the breed's future.

FROM THE HOLY LAND TO THE INTERNATIONAL SPOTLIGHT

From Jerusalem to Brooklyn, from Finland's exhibition ring to recognition in London and Ukraine, Princess Haya's story connects ancient imagery with a modern American revival. A possible appearance in Albuquerque would bring that journey before an entirely new audience.

Whether she reaches ringside on November 7 remains to be seen. But the prospect offers a compelling next chapter: a royal feline guest whose quiet presence could bring the splendor of Solomon's legendary throne—and the spirit of the Crown of Compassion—to an unforgettable championship night.
