

Schoch Equipment Expands Nationwide Access to Vehicles and Heavy Equipment

The company is growing its online marketplace to help buyers across the U.S. access cars, trucks, construction equipment, agricultural machinery, RVs, and delivery services.

Farmingdale, New York Oct 4, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Schoch Equipment Expands Nationwide Online Marketplace for Vehicles and Heavy Equipment

Schoch Equipment is continuing to expand its online presence, giving buyers across the United States access to used vehicles, construction machinery, agricultural equipment, recreational vehicles and specialty inventory through a digital purchasing platform.

Founded in 2000, Schoch Equipment has developed from a traditional equipment-focused operation into a broader online marketplace serving both individual buyers and dealers nationwide. Its inventory spans used cars, trucks, SUVs, vans and classic vehicles as well as tractors, harvesters, excavators, loaders, skid steers, backhoes, motor graders and other industrial machinery.

The company's growing digital strategy is designed around a simple idea: buyers should be able to research, evaluate and purchase specialized equipment or vehicles even when they are located hundreds or thousands of miles away.

Rather than limiting customers to local inventory, Schoch Equipment allows buyers to search nationally for the specific machine, vehicle, configuration or price range that fits their needs.

Bringing the Equipment-Buying Process Online

Through its online marketplace, Schoch Equipment provides both online bidding and Buy It Now purchasing, giving customers flexibility depending on how they prefer to buy.

The purchasing process is supported by digital services including free registration, electronic signatures, title and paperwork handling, insured transportation and home delivery. The company also lists live GPS tracking among the services available to customers during the delivery process.

For heavy-equipment customers in particular, being able to complete more of the transaction remotely can significantly expand the number of machines available to consider.

A contractor searching for a particular excavator, skid steer or tractor is no longer limited to equipment located within driving distance. Instead, buyers can review listings remotely and coordinate transportation after completing the transaction.

Cars, Trucks and Heavy Equipment Under One Marketplace

Schoch Equipment's inventory extends beyond traditional construction machinery.

According to its public dealer profile, the company handles used cars, trucks, SUVs, vans, classic cars and RVs alongside farm tractors, harvesters and industrial equipment including wheel loaders, skid-steer loaders, backhoe loaders, motor graders, mini excavators, full-size excavators, directional drills and crushing equipment.

That mix allows the company to serve both consumers and commercial customers from the same platform.

For buyers, the advantage is access to several categories of inventory without having to navigate completely separate purchasing systems.

An Increasing Independent Online Presence

As Schoch Equipment expands online, customers can also research the company outside of its own website.

Its profile on Motor Reviews currently lists 331 customer reviews, providing another public source for buyers researching the company before completing a purchase.

Recent reviews published on the platform cover purchases involving both vehicles and heavy equipment, including a Volkswagen Jetta, Kubota MX5400 tractor, Vermeer D24x40 directional drill and John Deere equipment. Several reviewers specifically discuss delivery, equipment condition, pricing transparency, paperwork and the buying process.

The reviews also illustrate the range of transactions handled by the company. Some customers describe having equipment delivered, while others discuss inspecting or collecting machinery directly.

Schoch Equipment also publicly responds to customer feedback on the platform, including both positive comments and concerns raised about individual transactions.

That public interaction gives prospective customers additional information when researching how the company handles purchases and after-sale communication.

Building Confidence in Remote Purchases

Buying a vehicle or piece of heavy equipment remotely requires more information than a traditional local transaction.

Customers need clear specifications, photographs, condition information, paperwork and a defined delivery process before making a decision.

Schoch Equipment says its listings include detailed condition information and pricing intended to help customers evaluate an item before completing a purchase.

The company also lists a 30-day money-back guarantee and 90-day limited warranty among the services provided through its marketplace. Buyers should review the applicable terms and conditions for individual purchases to understand the exact coverage.

Nationwide Delivery Extends the Traditional Dealership Model

Transportation is another important part of Schoch Equipment's online model.

Cars and trucks can require interstate vehicle carriers, while excavators, loaders and other machinery may require specialized trailers and hauling arrangements based on their dimensions and weight.

Schoch Equipment lists insured transportation and home delivery among its services, helping connect its physical inventory with customers outside New York.

The result is a dealership model that is less dependent on a customer physically visiting the property before beginning a purchase.

More Transparency for Buyers

Schoch Equipment's presence on independent review platforms is also becoming part of its broader digital footprint.

The Motor Reviews profile includes not only customer feedback but also employee references and transaction-specific comments. The profile currently identifies staff in management and digital sales roles and links directly back to Schoch Equipment's website.

For prospective buyers, having multiple sources of information can be particularly valuable when considering a large remote purchase such as a vehicle, tractor or piece of construction machinery.

A Modern Approach to Equipment and Vehicle Sales

The automotive and heavy-equipment industries have increasingly moved toward digital transactions, with buyers expecting detailed listings, video walkarounds, remote documentation and nationwide transportation options.

Schoch Equipment's continued investment in its online marketplace reflects that change.

By combining cars, recreational vehicles and commercial machinery with online bidding, direct purchasing and nationwide transportation, the company is building a purchasing model intended to serve customers well beyond its local New York market.
