Vytalyou Raises ₹9 Crore to Expand Longevity Clinic Network Across Mumbai

The longevity healthcare startup raised ₹9 crore in pre-Series A funding at a ₹33 crore valuation to open two new Mumbai clinics and expand its preventive healthcare model.

Pune, Maharashtra Oct 5, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Vytalyou, a doctor-led longevity and preventive healthcare startup, has raised ₹9 crore in a pre-Series A funding round at a valuation of approximately ₹33 crore.

The round was backed by Chetan Jain of Pharma Dose and Ratan Jain of Venus Industries. Vytalyou plans to use the funding to expand its network of Incremental Lifestyle Clinics in Mumbai.

Building a Network of Longevity Clinics

Founded in 2025 by molecular oncologist Dr. Chirantan Bose and radiologist Dr. Preetesh Bhandari, Vytalyou is developing a network of doctor-led longevity clinics focused on preventive healthcare.

The company combines predictive diagnostics with personalised preventive and regenerative therapies. Its broader objective is to identify potential health risks earlier and help people maintain better health for longer.

The latest expansion will add two new Mumbai centres by the end of the year, taking Vytalyou's network to three locations, including its existing centre in Powai.

The company also has plans to expand to 10 locations across India in the coming years.

Using Predictive Diagnostics for Preventive Care

Vytalyou's approach goes beyond conventional health check-ups that primarily provide a snapshot of a person's current health.

Its Predictive Longevity report is designed to assess health indicators and identify potential degenerative conditions at an earlier stage. Doctors then review the findings and develop a personalised programme based on the individual's health profile.

The programmes can include lifestyle guidance, additional assessments and medically supervised therapies focused on areas such as cellular and mitochondrial health.

Regular follow-ups are used to monitor individual progress and adjust the programme where required.

AI Adds Another Layer to Health Assessment

An AI-based algorithm is central to Vytalyou's Predictive Longevity Evaluation.

The system assesses an individual's health profile, biological ageing and potential areas of future risk. The results are then reviewed by doctors rather than being used as a standalone clinical decision-making tool.

Dr. Chirantan Bose, Founder of Vytalyou, said the company's focus is on increasing healthy years of life through a more comprehensive understanding of an individual's organ systems and personalised preventive programmes.

Dr. Preetesh Bhandari, Co-founder of Vytalyou, highlighted the role of blood work and radiological scans in providing a deeper view of human physiology. The company's preventive approach focuses on health issues associated with metabolic dysfunction, including cardiovascular, diabetic, musculoskeletal and neurological conditions.

Demand for Longevity Care

Since opening its first centre, Vytalyou says it has served close to 1,000 clients.

According to the company, approximately half of its clients came through walk-ins, while the remaining half came through word-of-mouth referrals.

The company sees growing interest in longevity-focused healthcare as consumers increasingly look beyond routine health checks toward preventive approaches that assess longer-term health risks.

Vytalyou also points to industry estimates suggesting that the longevity-care segment is growing at more than 30% annually, with some estimates placing annual growth above 50%.

Expansion Beyond Mumbai

The ₹9 crore funding gives Vytalyou capital to expand its physical clinic network while continuing to build its technology-led preventive healthcare model.

With three Mumbai centres planned and a longer-term target of 10 locations across India, the startup is positioning its clinic network around personalised longevity assessments, doctor-led preventive programmes and technology-supported health evaluation.

For Vytalyou, the next phase will be about taking this model beyond its first centre and establishing a wider presence in India's emerging longevity healthcare segment.

About Vytalyou

Vytalyou is a doctor-led longevity and preventive healthcare startup founded in 2025. The company combines predictive diagnostics, AI-supported health evaluation and personalised preventive programmes through its network of Incremental Lifestyle Clinics.

Media Contact

Packaging WebWire

@gmail.com

https://www.packagingwebwire.com/

Source : https://vytalyou.com/

See on IssueWire