Evoltion Sends Charging and Maintenance Help to the Spot Where an EV Driver Is Parked

Sheridan, Wyoming Nov 18, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - An EV driver watches the battery percentage slide, opens the map, and finds the nearest charger is miles off or already taken. Plenty of owners know that moment. The car is fine. The plan just stopped working.

Evoltion Enterprise built its app around that moment. The platform sends charging, maintenance, and emergency help to wherever the vehicle is parked, so the driver stays put and the service travels. Evoltion is free to download and built for iOS and Android.

A request takes a few taps. The driver shares a location and says what the car needs. Evoltion matches the request with a nearby verified provider and shows that provider's profile, rating, and estimated arrival time before anything is confirmed. Once booked, the driver follows the provider live on the map. Charging or maintenance happens at the curb, in the driveway, or in the office lot. Payment runs inside the app, and a digital receipt saves itself afterward. A rating closes the loop and feeds the reviews that keep the provider network accountable.

Drivers get more than a booking screen. SOS emergency charging covers the stranded scenario, and scheduled charging covers the planned ones. Predictive battery health alerts flag trouble early. Live notifications report every step, from booking confirmed to provider on the way, provider arrived, and payment complete. Messages and service history live in the same app, so nothing gets lost between visits.

Trust sits at the center of the design. Every provider is verified before accepting a first job, which matters when a stranger is about to work on a vehicle worth tens of thousands of dollars.

The other half of the platform serves the people doing the work. EV technicians and charging providers receive job requests from nearby owners, matched by GPS. They set their own pricing, define their own service area, and accept or decline jobs as their schedule allows. A dashboard follows earnings, payouts, and payment history, while tools for appointments, parts, and equipment inventory keep daily operations in one place. Ratings and reviews build the reputation that brings repeat customers.

Evoltion was designed to grow into more cities and more services over time. The company holds that EV ownership should feel effortless, and that convenience should reach well past the driveway.
