LexDo.it extends funding round to €2.4 million and expands services for newly incorporated businesses

The Italian leader in incorporating, managing and growing new businesses online expands its services with the launch of new HR management and registered office services, while accelerating the development of its AI agent

Milano, Lombardia Nov 17, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - LexDo.it, Italy's first digital platform for starting, managing and growing new businesses, today announces the extension of the Pre-Series A round it closed in November 2025. With this new capital, the total raised by the startup over the past 18 months rises to €2.4 million.

The new funds will go mainly towards developing artificial intelligence and strengthening services for businesses, consolidating LexDo.it's leadership in the digital creation and management of new companies in Italy.

The extension comes at a time of solid growth. LexDo.it currently positions as the market leader in digital company incorporation, with over 3% of newly incorporated businesses in Italy launched through its platform. In 2025 alone, more than 2,000 companies were incorporated entirely online with LexDo.it, almost double the previous year. Since its launch, 500,000 users have registered on the platform, generating more than 2.5 million documents and contracts. The team has grown to almost 100 people.

"This round extension brings the total capital raised over the past 18 months to €2.4 million and allows us to accelerate the development of our platform. We will invest primarily in AI to build an assistant that knows each business in detail, connects with the tools entrepreneurs use every day, such as invoicing, and works alongside our team of expert professionals, who remain available whenever needed. Our offering is now complete, bringing together the services SMEs need to start and run their business on a single platform. We believe the future of professional services lies in combining human expertise, software and AI to deliver services that were previously unimaginable and help businesses navigate bureaucracy across Europe" said Giovanni Toffoletto, CEO and Founder of LexDo.it.

At the same time, LexDo.it is expanding its offer with two new services: HR management and registered office. With these now in place, anyone starting a business in Italy finds on LexDo.it everything they need to set up from scratch and run their company day to day.

The first, a digital HR management service, supports businesses throughout the employment relationship, from hiring and payslips to social security contributions, mandatory filings and directors' fees. Each business is assigned a dedicated employment consultant, available remotely by chat and phone. Employment advice now sits alongside the tax and accounting services already on the platform, giving businesses a single point of contact for administration, tax and staff.

With the second, a registered office service, LexDo.it provides an address in the center of Milan and handles company mail, which is received, scanned and forwarded by email. The service is available both to new companies, which receive the address in time for their articles of incorporation, and to existing businesses that want to transfer their registered office. It lets founders run their company from anywhere, protects the privacy of their home or office, and reduces the risk that a registered letter, an official notice or a deadline missed in time becomes a problem for the business.

The next step is an AI that knows the whole company. In July, LexDo.it introduced an AI-powered assistant that answers businesses' legal and tax questions in minutes. With the new capital, development is speeding up: the goal is to give every entrepreneur an AI that knows their company in detail, from documents and deadlines to accounts and staff, and lets them manage it from anywhere, with a team of professionals on hand whenever needed.
