PropFirmRefree.com Launches Prop Firm Comparison Platform That Scores Prop Trading Firms on Rules, Payouts and Real Cost

New site uses a six-factor Referee Score and green, yellow and red cards to show traders the drawdown, payout and fee rules behind each funded account.

New York City, New York Nov 19, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - PropFirmRefree.com has launched a prop firm comparison platform that scores prop trading firms on their rules, payout evidence and real cost, rather than on headline account sizes or discount codes. The platform's first scorecard, published for November 2026, ranks 11 prop trading firms using one published scoring framework.

Funded trader programs are usually marketed on account size and profit split. Those numbers say little about what a trader must do to keep a funded account. A daily loss limit, a trailing drawdown, a consistency rule or a ban on news trading can decide whether a challenge is passed, and some prop firm rules only apply after the evaluation stage. PropFirmRefree was built to put those rules next to the price, so traders can compare prop firms on what actually affects them.

"Most traders compare prop firms on account size, profit split and the discount code of the week," said the Refree Team at PropFirmRefree. "The rules that end accounts – trailing drawdowns, consistency rules, funded-stage restrictions – are usually in the fine print. PropFirmRefree puts those rules where traders can see them before they pay."

How the Referee Score rates prop trading firms

Every firm on the platform receives a Referee Score built from six factors: payout evidence, rule clarity, real cost, track record, trader sentiment and product fit. The same framework is applied to forex, futures and crypto prop firms alike, so a $50 challenge and a $500 challenge can be compared on the same terms.

Green, yellow and red cards for prop firm rules

Findings are shown with football-style cards. A green card marks payout data the site has checked against evidence, a yellow card marks rules that deserve a closer look, and a red card marks serious concerns under the platform's published criteria. A Rulebook explains common prop firm rules in plain language, including daily loss limits, trailing and end-of-day drawdowns, consistency rules and news-trading restrictions, and dated Rulings log when a firm changes its terms.

Prop firm reviews and head-to-head comparisons

Each firm has its own review covering evaluation rules, funded-account rules, fees, payout terms and the evidence behind each rating. Traders can also compare prop firms side by side, or filter by market, payout speed and rule type to find programs that match how they trade.

Independent scoring, disclosed commercial model

PropFirmRefree is supported by affiliate commissions and discloses this on the site. Under its editorial policy, commissions do not affect Referee Scores or cards, and paid placements are labelled separately. The platform separates firm-reported claims from information it can check, and leaves data fields empty when a claim cannot be confirmed.

"The biggest account is not always the best deal, and the cheapest challenge is not always the lowest-risk choice," the Refree Team added. "A prop firm comparison is only useful if traders can see how each score was reached."

The full set of prop firm reviews and rankings is free to use and is updated as firms change their rules, prices and payout terms.

About PropFirmRefree

PropFirmRefree.com is a prop firm comparison and research platform. Using a referee-style scoring and risk-card system, it reviews prop trading firms on their rules, funding programs, costs, payout evidence and track record. The platform offers firm reviews, head-to-head comparisons, a prop firm Rulebook and dated Rulings. PropFirmRefree may earn affiliate commissions from some links and discloses its commercial relationships on its website.

Disclaimer: Prop firm challenges usually involve simulated trading and participation fees. Trading carries financial risk. PropFirmRefree does not provide personalized financial advice.

Media Contact

Prop firm Refree

@propfirmrefree.com

https://propfirmrefree.com/

Source : https://propfirmrefree.com/

See on IssueWire