Sharmila Joghi Channels Love and Loss Into Uplifting Pop-Rock Single “Superwomangirl”

Amsterdam, Netherlands Nov 16, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Rotterdam, Netherlands October 28, 2026 Netherlands-based singer-songwriter Sharmila Joghi returns with a deeply personal new release. Her latest single, “Superwomangirl,” is now streaming on Spotify and all major platforms, alongside a newly released official lyrics video.

More than a song, “Superwomangirl” is a celebration of a mother’s love that refuses to fade. Written in memory of her daughter Tanisha, the track blends driving pop-rock energy with raw emotion, capturing themes of strength, creativity, and the bond that continues beyond loss.

The single follows Sharmila’s August 2026 release, “Golden Heart,” and forms part of a growing catalogue where she explores healing, honesty, artistic freedom, and shared humanity through music.

Tanisha passed away in 2021. She was a young creative in her own right. Growing up around studios and stages with her mother, she began writing songs and composing her own pieces on keyboard at an early age. Sharmila often speaks of Tanisha as a kindred creative spirit — a young artist whose imagination and love for music continue to inspire her mother’s work. One of Tanisha’s own keyboard compositions is still available to listen to online, giving audiences a glimpse into her talent.

Sharmila’s own musical journey spans decades. She performed at Rotterdam Ahoy in 2005 as part of Kids Adventure, a moment later reflected in her video for “Burning For You (Club Mix).” By 2013, she was sharing her original music on YouTube and building her identity as a singer-songwriter.

Outside of music, Sharmila trained in social work and spent years working in children’s residential care, women’s shelters, and refugee support across the Netherlands. That experience — working closely with vulnerable women and children — continues to shape the advocacy at the heart of her songs.

In recent years, Sharmila has spoken openly about the personal cost of standing up for her artistic identity, including a painful period of separation from her daughter and difficult experiences within care and social work systems. She says those years left a lasting impact, and music became her way of processing, speaking out, and rebuilding.

That journey continues with two companion releases. Alongside the single, Sharmila has published the children’s picture book script, _Tanisha The Golden-Hearted Superwoman Girl_, now available on Amazon. The book reimagines Tanisha as a brave, kind, and imaginative heroine who encourages young readers to embrace music, art, courage, and self-expression.

Together, the song and the book carry one message: that creativity can turn grief into connection, and that a daughter’s light can keep shining through art.

“Superwomangirl” is a declaration of resilience — a tribute to a daughter who created freely, and to a mother who continues to create in her honour. Through it, Sharmila invites listeners to think about creative freedom, compassion, and the healing power of telling the truth through art.

Listen and Discover More:

Spotify: https://open.spotify.com/album/0fZrk0yoWlmamllHOUnGWl

Official Lyrics Video: https://m.youtube.com/watch?v=qrdtexBGoQ4

Tanisha’s Keyboard Composition: https://m.youtube.com/watch?v=9cXOI7z-p4U

Children’s Book on Amazon:_Tanisha The Golden-Hearted Superwoman Girl – A Picture Book Script_

https://www.amazon.nl/dp/B0HMKB4CQJ

Background Feature: https://lyricalweekly.com/singer-songwriter-sharmila-uses-music-and-advocacy-to-raise-awareness-about-her-personal-journey/

About Sharmila Joghi

Sharmila Joghi is a Dutch singer-songwriter, performer, and former social worker based in the Netherlands. She has performed in both the Netherlands and the United States, including opening for O-Town, and continues to release music rooted in lived experience. Her work blends personal storytelling with advocacy for women, children, and independent creative voices.

Media Contact:

Sharmila Joghi

Email: sharmilajoghi@gmail.com

Media Contact

Sharmila

@gmail.com

0031628332448

Kalverstraat

Source : Sharmila

See on IssueWire