The first four sessions are led by the client's primary counselor from residential treatment. After that, Siam Rehab's aftercare coordinator continues the sessions.

What the sessions cover:
Sessions focus on relapse prevention, managing triggers, emotional wellbeing, and accountability in recovery after returning home. Before discharge, the team works with each client to find support close to home and plan how to maintain sobriety. If a relapse occurs, clients can contact Siam Rehab, and the team will assess their needs and, if necessary, help arrange further residential treatment.

Program limits:
The program consists of scheduled sessions and is not a 24-hour emergency service. Siam Rehab does not guarantee sobriety.

Quote:
"We're not simply providing treatment while clients are in Thailand. We're continuing to support their recovery for another two years. Recovery doesn't end when someone leaves rehab, and staying connected to a team that knows their history matters most when difficulties arise," said Wade Dupuis, Managing Director of Siam Rehab.

Standard aftercare:
Clients who complete the 4-week (US$12,000) or 8-week (US$22,000) program receive 8 one-on-one online sessions over 12 weeks after discharge: 4 weekly sessions with their primary counselor, followed by 4 sessions every two weeks with the aftercare coordinator.
